Activities of the project organisation (aims, objectives, actions)	The Aktivspielplatz Raitelsberg (AKI) is an adventure playground that aims at offering children and young people the opportunity to play and learn social skills such as taking responsibility and working in a group while keeping them off the streets and away from often problematic conditions at home. The playground has 4 staff members as well as freelance staff and several volunteers. The AKI has two main areas of activities: one open area with a play house, a fireplace, a soccer field and a half pipe, a computer room and a play construction site, as well as an animal area with sheep, goats, rabbits and guinea pigs. The AKI offers workshops and activities to the children and youths visiting the project, many of whom are disadvantaged. The project wants to give them a place to feel at home, keep them occupied with playful and educational activities, teach them social skills and give them access to pedagogically trained adults.
Description of the community the project is situated in	The AKI is located in the city of Stuttgart, which has around 620.000 inhabitants and is the capital of the federal state of Baden-Württemberg, in the Southwest of Germany and close to France. The district the AKI is located in is called Raitelsberg, close to the city center and characterized by its economically disadvantaged population. Most of the residents have a migrant background, and many are unemployed and on social welfare.
Description of the tasks of the volunteer in the project	The volunteer will have the opportunity to work in all areas of the adventure playground. One main task is looking after the animals: feeding them in the mornings and helping with cleaning the stable. The volunteer will also show interested children how to feed the animals and how to take care of them, for example brushing the sheep and cleaning the stable together with small groups of children. The volunteer will also work in the open area, and interact directly with the children by suggesting activities such as football matches

	or other sports, showing them how to build a fire, cooking with the children or assisting in the computer room. The AKI is very interested in facilitating cultural exchange between the volunteer and the children, many of whom also have a non-German family background. The volunteer is very welcome to, for example, suggest games, sports and creative activities from his or her country of origin, or cook typical meals with the children.
Required skills and interests of the volunteer	The AKI has the following expectations towards the volunteer's required skills and interests: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- enjoy working with children and young people</li> <li>- enjoy working with animals and outdoors</li> <li>- be open-minded and motivated</li> <li>- be open to work independently</li> <li>- ability to work in a team</li> <li>- willing to bring in own skills and interests</li> <li>- basic knowledge of German language would be an advantage</li> </ul>
Working hours, working time:	The weekly working hours will be 30-35 hours. Language classes counts as working time.
Training and support for the volunteer	There is a mentor who is responsible for answering any questions and supervising the work of the volunteer, and who speaks English. The project has much experience with German volunteers and has been a host project for the European Voluntary Service for several years now. There is also always at least one other full-time volunteer in the project.
